Deacon Quirk's Interview with One in Affliction.

Just after supper I heard the door bell, and, looking out of the window, I caught a glimpse of Deacon Quirk's old diabelfat hat, on the upper step. My heart sank, but there was no help for me. I waited for Phoebe to bring his name, desperately listening to her heavy steps, and letting her knock three times before I answered. I confessed to having taken my hair down twice, washed my hands an uncounted number of times, and been along time brushing my dress; also to forgetting my handkerchief, and having to go back for it after I was down stairs. Deacon Quirk looked tired of waiting. I hope he was.

O, what an ill-natured thing to say! What is coming over me? What would Roy think? What could he?

"Good evening, Mary," said the Deacon, severely, when I went in. "Probably he did not mean to speak severely, but the truth is, I think he was a little vexed that I kept him waiting. I said good evening, and apologized for my delay, and sat down as far from him as I conveniently could. There was an awful silence.

I came in this evening," said the Deacon, breaking it with a cough, "I came, here, to confer with you."

I looked up. "I thought somebody had ought to come," continued the Deacon, "to confer with you as a Christian brother on your spiritual condition."

I opened my eyes. "To confer with you on your spiritual condition," repeated my visitor. "I understand that you have had some unfortunate exercises of mind under your affliction, and I observed that you absented yourself from the communion table last Sunday."

"I did."

"Intentionally?"

"Intentionally."

He seemed to expect me to say something more; and, seeing that there was no help for it, I answered "I did not feel fit to go. I should not have dared to go. God does not seem to me just now what he used to. He has dealt very bitterly with me. But, however, wicked I may be, I will not mock him. I think Deacon Quirk, that I did right to stay away."

"Well," said the Deacon twirling his hat with a puzzled look, "perhaps you did. But I don't see the excuse for any such feelings as would make it necessary. I think it is my duty to tell you, Mary, that I am sorry to see you in such a rebellious state of mind."

I made no reply.

"Afflictions come from God," he observed, looking at me as impressively as if he supposed I had never heard the statement before, "afflictions come from God, and, however affliction of however crushing they may be, it is our duty to submit to them. Glory in tribulation, St. Paul says; glory in tribulation."

I continued silent.

"I sympathize with you in this sad dispensation," he proceeded. "Of course you were very fond of Roy; his natural you should be, natural." He stopped, perplexed, I suppose, by something in my face. Yes, it was natural; poor human nature sets a great deal by earthly props and affections. But its duty, as a Christian, and a church member, to be resigned.

I tapped the floor with my foot. I began to think that I could not bear much more.

"To be resigned, my dear young friend. To say Abba Father, and pray that the will of the Lord may be done."

"Deacon Quirk," said I, "I am not resigned. I pray the dear Lord with all my heart to make me so, but I will not say that I am, until I am, if ever that time comes. As for those words about the Lord's will, I would no more take them on my lips than I would blasphemy, unless I could speak them honestly, and that I cannot do. We had better talk of something else now, had we not?"

Deacon Quirk looked at me. It struck me that he would look very much so at a Mormon or a Hottentot, and I wondered whether he were going to excommunicate me on the spot.

As soon as he began to speak, however, I saw that he was only bewildered, honestly bewildered, and honestly shocked; I do not doubt that I had said bewildering and shocking things.

"My friend," he said solemnly, "I shall pray for you and leave you in the hands of the Lord. Your brother, whom He has removed from this earthly home for His own wise—"

"We will not talk any more about Roy, if you please, I interrupted; "he is happy and safe."

"Item!—I hope so," he replied, moving uneasily in his chair; "I believe he never made a profession of religion, but there is no limit to the mercy of God. It is very unsafe for the young to think that they can rely on a death-bed repentance, but our God is a covenant-keeping God, and Royal's mother was a pious woman. If you cannot say with certainty that he is numbered with the redeemed, you are justified, perhaps, in hoping so."

I turned sharply upon him, but words died on my lips. How could I tell the man of that short, clear letter that came to me in December, that Roy's was no death-bed repentance, but the quiet natural growth of a life that had always been the life of the pure in heart; of his many beliefs and unselfish motives; of that dawning sense of friendship with Christ of which he used to speak so modestly, dreading lest he should not be honest with himself?

"Perhaps I ought not to call myself a Christian," he wrote—"I learned the words by heart, and I shall make no profession to be such, till I am sure of it, but my life has not seemed to me for a long time to be my own. Bought with a price, just expresses it. I can point to no time at which I was conscious by any revolution of feeling, experiencing a change of heart, but it seems to me that a man's heart might be changed for all that. I do not know that it is necessary for us to be able to watch every footstep of God. The way is all that concerns us,—to see that we follow it and him. This I am sure of; and knocking about in this army life only convinces me of what I have felt in a certain way before,—that it is the only way and he the only guide to follow."

But how could I say anything of this to Deacon Quirk?—Oh my sealed and sacred treasure, of all that Roy left me the dearest. At any rate I did not. It seemed too obstinate and cruel in him to come there and say what he had been saying. He might have known that I would not say that Roy had gone to Heaven, if—why, if there had been the breath of doubt. It is a possibility of which I cannot rationally conceive, but I suppose that his name would never have passed my lips.

So I turned away from Deacon Quirk, and shut my mouth, and waited for him to finish. Whether the idea began to struggle into his mind that he might not have been making a very comforting remark, I cannot say; but he started very soon to go.

"Supposing you are right, and Royal was saved at the eleventh hour," he said at parting, with one of his stolid efforts to be consolatory, that were worse than his rebukes, "if he is singing the song of Moses and the Lamb (he pointed with his big, dingy thumb at the ceiling,) he doesn't rebel against the doings of Providence. All his affections are subdued to God,—merged, as you might say,—merged in worshiping before the great White Throne. He doesn't think this miserable earthly sphere of any importance, compared with that eternal and exceeding glory. In the appropriate words of the poet,—

"O, not to one created thing Shall our embrace be given. But all our joy shall be in God, For only God is Heaven."

Those are very spiritual and scriptural lines, and it is very proper to reflect how true they are."

I saw him go out, and came up here and locked myself in, and have been walking round and round the room. I must have walked a good while, for I feel as weak as a baby.

Can the man in any state of existence be made to comprehend that he has been holding me on the rack this whole evening?

Yet he came under a strict sense of duty, and in the kindness of all the heart he has! I know, or I ought to know, that he is a good man,—far better in the sight of God to-night, I do not doubt, than I am.

But it hurts,—it cuts,—that thing which he said when he went out; because I suppose it must be true; because it seems to me greater than I can bear to have it true.

Roy, away in that dreadful Heaven can have no thought of me, cannot remember how I loved him, how he left me all alone. The singing and the worshipping must take up all his time. God wants all. He is a "Jealous God." I am nothing more to Roy. —From "The Gates Ajar," by E. S. ART PHILPS.

SIZE OF THE STARS.—How large are the stars, and are they alike or do they differ in size? It used to be conjectured that they are of somewhat similar magnitude, presumably about as great as our sun, and the differences of apparent size are due to differences of distance; but, when astronomers discovered that some of the smaller stars are the nearest to our system, this idea fell to the ground. A German computer has now, however, calculated the actual dimensions of one particular star, and finds that its mass is rather more than three times that of the sun. The star in question is less than the fourth magnitude—a comparatively small one. What then must be the size of the Sirius and Aldebaran class? The reason of its selection for this determination was that it is one of the components of what is called a binary system—two stars revolving about each other like the earth and the planet—and the motions of the system afford data for the computation. The star's distance from us is a million and a quarter times that of the earth from the sun, so that light takes twenty years to travel hither from it.—Once a Week.

A clergyman had taught an old man in his parish to read, and had found him an apt pupil. After the lessons had finished, he had not been able to call at the cottage for some time, and when he did he only found the wife at home. "How's John?" "He's canny, sir," said his wife. "How does he get on with his reading?" "Nicely, sir."

"Ah, I suppose he'll read his bible very comfortably, now." "Bible, sir! bless you, he was out of the bible into the newspaper long ago."

An intolerable bore, having talked a friend nearly out of his senses, finally struck out on the oyster, which he called one of the most remarkable specimens of creative wisdom extant; when his friend interrupted him and closed the debate with the exclamation: "The oyster! Ah! yes, the oyster is a glorious fellow; he always knows when to shut up!"

There is an old English statute which prohibits people from getting married after a certain hour in the day, because such a solemn obligation ought to be entered into only when the parties are duly sober.

Four things come not back—the word spoken, the sped arrow, the past life, and the neglected opportunity.

Passion dies, soon killing itself with its own food. Esteem lives and strengthens by its own power.

THIS ASSOCIATION, established in the city of Youngstown, Ohio, holds, by Public Drawing, to commence at 10 o'clock, A. M.,

ON THE 28TH OF APRIL, 1869.

AT EXCELSIOR HALL, in said City and Real Estate, the p

[Shares. Shares are issued by the Association at $100 each—half and quarter shares in proportion. Each share entitles the holder to one share of the certificate of said share to such article of personal or real property as may be distributed to it at the drawing. Half and quarter shares to have half and quarter interests in the property.

Distribution. Every article to be distributed will be numbered in a schedule prepared by the officers of the Association, and a printed copy will be furnished to every shareholder. The drawing will be superintended by a committee of five disinterested persons, named by the Association. One number will be drawn from each receipt and the holder of the certificate whose number is drawn will be entitled to the article whose number is drawn to it.

Real Estate. The Real Estate of the Association consists of a large number of building lots, now vacant, and other lots on which are erected dwelling houses, and suitable apartments, furnishing very desirable residences. This property is all within the City of Youngstown, and may be more particularly specified as follows:

City Lots. FIFTY Lots, from fifty to one hundred feet front by one hundred and fifty feet deep, situated in the south-east part of the city in close proximity to the business iron works, comprising rolling mills, nail factories and furnaces, of Brown, Bonnell & Co., the Youngstown Manufacturing Co. and of Ward, Chicago Iron Works, and other manufacturing and business establishments. They lie on a short distance south and east of the Presque Isle street bridge, and front on Gibson, Park, Erie, and other streets. The soil allows the construction of dry cellars, and durable wells of excellent water are obtainable by digging to a moderate depth. Lots valued at $300 each.

Dwelling Houses and Lots. These consist of Ten new frame houses, newly painted outside and inside and in perfect order, are located as follows: Five on Scott street in the northern part of the city, and but a few rods from Wick avenue, the Fifth over and Erie street of the city, into which Scott street runs right angles. They are two stories and contain each, rooms, four bedrooms, and a full bath, and are situated on lots one hundred and eighty feet, and will be fitted up for early in the spring, or as soon as pipes can be laid along Scott street, and have been already up Wick avenue. Valued at $300 each, and rent at $200 per annum.

Five on Liberty street (formerly Holmes' road) and Kayen avenue, in the north-west quarter of the city, a few rods from the Cleveland and Mahoning R.R. depot, they are designated by numbers, and on a lot No. 1, corner of Liberty street and Kayen avenue, is a two-story house, containing three rooms, a full bath, and a lot one hundred and twenty feet front by one hundred and twenty feet deep.
